

The Scale Ladder of Attribution

Zoom out one level and part of what looked like personal failure is handed back to a larger process

Zoom out · pessimism

1 · Substrate

Carbon handing off to silicon is Earth's next step, not a human dereliction

Vol. 1 §9.5 · Epilogue: from carbon-led to silicon-autonomous

Drops: failure to hold ground

2 · Species

Nobody crosses unchanged — enhanced isn't 'human'; unenhanced faces the same pressure

Vol. 1 §9.1 · Enhancement isn't a luxury, it's a survival strategy

Drops: not making the surviving class

3 · Era

You live in a period with a name, a start and an end — and it will pass

Vol. 1 throughout · Vol. 2 ch. 12: The Transition

Drops: blaming yourself for the timing

4 · Generation

Your ruler came from the last world — and that world is vanishing

Vol. 1 ch. 5: Population Decline · ch. 8: AI Reshapes a Life

Drops: failing by an old ruler

5 · The Individual — what is left

What is genuinely yours once the first four are unloaded. Vol. 3 starts here.

Self-consistency handles only this — not the first four levels, and not your cash flow

Zoom in · action

Method: pessimism is one layer of defence, action is the stronger one

Pessimism = the first layer

Lower expectations, gain tolerance for the worst

Action = the stronger layer

Act. Action moves more than lowered expectations

We have always lived toward death — from day one, one more day lived is one fewer left

AI did not add an endpoint; it only let you see the one that was always there

Seeing the end always reads two ways: "so why bother" and "so don't waste it" — same fact

Zoom out only → paralysis (reading "we all die" as "so why bother" inverts finitude) Zoom in only → collapse (billing a whole era to yourself)
